RUSH AT BOARD OF REGISTRATION

Crowds of Applicants Come to Sign Rolls-Many from Out of Town.

Activity on the part of the party leaders and adjurations from the press served to bring out large crowds yesterday to the registration booth in Honolulu Hale, Throughout the day the Board of Registration was kept busy and a large number of names was added to the lists of persons registered. Up to date something over 4,800 people have signed the lists and this indicates that the total registration for the Island of Oahu will reach over

It has been through no fault of theirs that this country has become a Territory, and in so becoming, has deprived them of any right in the Government. Under the organic act it becomes necessary for a man to acquire citizenship, that he be of proper age first; second, that he have a residence of a sufficient length of time, and third, of being a man who can read and write the English or Hawalian language. I understand that there are thousands of Portuguese who may be able to fulfill some of these requireable to fulfill some of these or some taxes and the most important ever held in this the most important ever Well lighted and comfortably seated. AN UNPAIR POLICY.

This poley of the Republican party, to my miles, and I spenk as an individual, is unfair to the people who are worthy of fair treatment. I ask you to wait until you have seen the platform of the Democratic party before you decide for whom you will east your vote. I make no promises for the Democratic party: I don't know what its platform will be, but I have strong faith that the Democratic party will never advocate the passage of a law that will hurt an honest working man. Mr. Ozario was made temporary chairman and A. R. Vierra, secretary. When the nomination of Mr. Vierra was made, that gentleman happened to be standing outside the door. When elected he looked anxiously about the hall and all eyes were turned toward him. Finally it flashed through his brain that he was elected secretary. "There are so many Vierras in town that I thought it was someone else," he exclaimed.

Young Men's Republican Club.

The officers and campaign committee of the Young Men's Republican Club held a red hot meeting yesterday afterpurpose of considering further work in connection with the campaign. It was connection with the campaign. It was decided to hold a public meeting in the club rooms on Nuuanu street every Monday evening until after the election. The rooms will be kept open every night from 7 to 9 o'clock, and instructions both in English and Hawaiian in regard to the method of voting the Australian ballot system will be given. completed that position. About nine or tending years ago Mr. More suffered a serious accident in the works. A quantity of waste was being crushed and some of the machinery broke and fell on Mr. More who was directing operations. He was quite seriously injured and it is believed that this accident was the original cause of the disease which finally carried him away.

Eight years ago Mr. More moved to Hawaii to accept the position of engineer at the Pepeekeo plantation. He remained there for some time and was later connected with Papalkou plantation, and was living there when the illine ses seized him that caused his death.

During his residence in Honolulu Mr. More was quite prominent in business circles and he numbered his friends by the thousand. He was a prominent member of the Volunteer Fire Department during the early 80's and was at one time assistant chief of the department during the early 80's and was at one time assistant chief of the defaut.

There will be a meeting of the Territory.

It was only the uncertainty in the time of the arrival of the Kinau on Saturday, that necessitated the chartering of the Waialeale, for if the Kinau could have been certain to arrive before noon on Saturday, the Prince would have had time to register and then present his petition to Secretary Cooper before the latter's office closed. But the Kinau is frequently late in returning, and the Democrats were not going to run any risks of being minus a candidate when election day came, so the steamer was chartered, and now she ought to be well on her way back to Honolulu with David and Bert Colburn, who did the Paul Reverse act for him, on board.

baths at the Volcano House, says a New York paper.

In every direction about the group of four craters commonly known as Kilauea the earth is cracked open by soams of greater or less extent. As they are commonly screened by dense growth of the ma'uma'u forn, which grows all the more rank by reason of the heat drawn up from below, these crevices make it dangerous to travel out of beaten paths. Some of them breathe out a sluggish current of warm and moist air; others are richly charged with sulphur fumes. Near the Volcano House all the crevices are rich in sulphur, and one large rift is completely covered with banks of the yellow mineral, to which additions are steadily made by the exhalations from below. Some small seams near the hotel have been utilized for the baths. The seam is lutted over with clay to confine its exhalations to a single vent, which may be controlled as needed. Over this the bath-house is built, three or four seams providing for as many bath establishments. The bather finds the same sort of accommodation as in a bath-house where the vepor comes from water boiled by the experditure of coal and visible pieces of brimstone. When the attendant has closed up the cabinet the bather is instructed to pull the string and turn on the volcano.

Of course, it is perfectly safe. No one to pull the string and turn on the volcano.

Of course, it is perfectly safe. No one has ever yet been crupted or otherwise inaltreated in the volcane taths, but it does seem a somewhat risky than to do, to pull the plug out of one of the world's largest volcanoes and to turn on for petty and personal needs its might of rteem and brimstone, but nothing seismic happens when a tur at the cord pulls the wooden plug out of the immensities; there is no leaping of the white-hot lava is the crater; no shaking of the earth in throesmothing but a warm puff of moist vapor in the cabinet to show that Kilauca is a mild and obedient servant of the bathhouse. It is said that these volcanic baths do more good than any others, because the sulphur is carried in the vapor in the way best fitted for absorption by the human body. However that may be, it is a fact that after sitting in the seam for a leng time the body shows no visible trace of the sulphur, although a coating of yellow is set on everything else that may be in the cabinet.
